OREGON CHESS NEWS

MAY 2016 PCC QUAD 45

By Brian Berger

Portland, OR — May 7, 2016

A Quad and a Small Swiss held the ten players who showed up for the Portland Chess Club's May Quad 45—not a large crowd, but an enthusiastic one. Amongst the ten were some new faces for this monthly tournament, usually held at mid-month, but this month held on the seventh, so as not to conflict with other scheduled events.

Heading the Quads (and immediately thereafter a blitz tournament, which was not held this time because of a lack of players) were as usual, the team of Mike & Mike—better known to those who regularly attend this and other tournaments held at the club as Chief TD Micah Smith and Chief Assistant TD Mike Lilly—a powerhouse pair of pairing partners!

In the Small Swiss, one of those new faces, Wesley Garretson (Unrated-1467P), showed that his previous, mostly online play, prepared him enough to become a real-world, provisional C-player, by scoring a win against Dave Prideaux (1236-1213—0.0/3) and a draw against the second place winner, James Tsai (1550-1565—2.5/3).

Winning first place in the same section was James Bean (1622-1637), who turned in a perfect score, allowing him a $10 discount on his next entry and the choice of a chess book. (It seems to me that, if anyone needs a free chess book at these tournaments, it should go to the big loser—just saying.) And James Tsai, mentioned above, also received a discount on his next entry, which was $5 for his second place effort.

Turning to the Quad that was reserved for the four highest-rated players (me included this time, as the really big competition seemingly had something better to do), it was the young Ethan Wu (1803-1809—2.0/3) and the cagey Chris Burris (1778-1788—2.0/3) who tied for first, each receiving his choice of a chess book and $5 off a future entry fee.

In addition to the above prizes, Wu was also awarded a medal for being a Scholastic player. Scholastic players who tie for first in their section with at least 1.5 points can receive a medal to show or wear, a small trophy if they win or tie with at least 2.5 points, or the “Big Enchilada” trophy for a 3.0 points win.

Having to settle for a tie for third-fourth (a category that in this tournament carries no prizes, and would not normally be mentioned, but for the fact that it was me who tied) was Isaac Vega (1715-1704—1.0/3) and Brian “Just Glad To Be Here” Berger (1690-1684—1.0/3). And it seems our only claim to fame was Vega beating Burris in round one, and my beating Vega in round three.

Personally, a couple of losses in this higher-rated section can easily be tolerated—it’s the lost games to underrated Munchkins that hurt the most. That said, I hope the next Quad 45 has plenty of higher-rated players as well as Munchkins.

2ND ANNUAL ROSE CITY SECTIONALS

By Brian Berger

Portland, OR — May 14-15, 2016

They just kept coming, and coming, and coming, until 40 players and a number of parents had squeezed themselves within the normally ample confines of the Portland Chess Club, there for the 2nd Annual Rose City Sectionals. Compared to its debut last year, when 25 players showed to sample this Game 120 (this year with a 15 second delay), this was quite an increase.

Overseeing this gathered mass of anxious chess aficionados was that popular TD team of Mike & Mike—Chief TD Micah Smith and Assistant Chief TD Mike Lilly, whose tandem officiating keeps things running smoothly and on time. And as an extra perk was the before tournament talk of Mr. Lilly, who has now got his spiel down to a science, wherein he enumerates the pitfalls of not following tournament etiquette (cell phones off or you could forfeit your first born) and other such threats that have the crowd rolling on the floor with laughter.

One in attendance who did a considerable amount of rolling (and not just at the vaudevillian performance of Mr. Lilly) was the always popular to have around Morgan The Dog, who coaxed his live-in companion, Jerrold “I Just Want To Reach 1600 Before It Is Over” Richards, to enter this year’s Sectionals. And oddly enough Richards (1457-1483—2.0/4) was in one of his more coherent moments, enabling him to take a game from James Bean (1637-1616—2.0/4) and another from Arliss Dietz (1500-1500—0.5/4), causing one to believe there is still hope for Richards to achieve his life’s goal.

Because there was only one player registered to play in the U1500 section (talk about odd), Geoff Kenway (1295-1314—2.0/4), that section was combined with the U1700, making it the U1700/1500 section, Geoff agreeing to play in this cobbled together gathering, while guaranteed to take home the U1500 prize of $135. One would call this a win-win situation, no matter Kenway’s final result. It has to be the easiest $135 bucks anyone ever made in the history of the Portland Chess Club's hundreds of tournaments!

A plus for the other winners of their sections was the extra $75 reserved for whomever took second in the U1500. As no one was eligible for that money, it was decided to use it to increase the winners' take in the other sections.

Along with Richards giving a passable performance in the U1700, there was a three-way tie for first and second, with Greg Markowski (1595-1623), Michael Olson (1562-1593) and Mike Hasuike (1518-1610), achieving 3.0/4 points and splitting the winnings to the tune of $78.50 each—Hasuike giving one of his best performances in a while by beating a couple of 1600+ players and drawing his other two games, adding 92 points to his own rating.

Jumping upwards at this point to the U1900 section, there were eight players vying for the spoils, with the highest rated being Moshe Rachmuth (1891-1913—3.5/4). His 3.5 points were enough to win the first place prize of $155, and to just edge out Nicholas Hawkins (1816-1840—3.0/4), whose 3.0 points secured him second place and $100.

Incidentally, Hawkins was one of a number of players to drive long distances to participate in these Sectionals, his home being Boise, Idaho. I had the pleasure of playing him (I lost) to a tough endgame, and he expressed how much of a pleasure it was to meet the guy who writes part of the Oregon section for Northwest Chess, and to see in person an Oregon celebrity, Morgan The Dog.

Now you might at this point be asking yourself why a 1684 player (me) would be playing in the U1900 section? And the answer would be because it was "there," and it only cost $5 more to play in a section above your rating. But the other reason I chose to play up was that I felt I could do well there (after all, I had honed my skills playing unrated and underrated nine and ten-year olds, and figured 1700 and 1800 players would be a breeze after that!). And although I won no prizes, I validated my belief by drawing a 1776 and an 1891 player while also managing to win against a tough 1756 player—my reward? 23 additional rating points and the reaching of a personal best by becoming a 1700+ player.

Now that I have tooted my own horn, it is time to look at the Open section, where Karl Cosner (1921-2004—3.5/4), who has relocated to the area and recently became active again on the tournament scene, took first place and $170 in a field of 12 players—many of them pretty tough customers, the toughest of whom was Lennart Bjorksten (2174-2149—2.0/4). But to give you an idea of what I mean by "tough customers," Bjorksten could do no better than come in sixth best.

In fact, the competition was so fierce they needed a doctor in the house to see to wounded pride. Unfortunately, it was Dr. Eric Pacini (1951P-2008P—3.0/4), who was himself dealing out a good portion of those wounds. Having not played in a rated event in nearly three years, the doctor (still a provisional player) showed himself to be more a “Grim Reaper” than a “Dr. Kildare,” taking second place and adding $115 to his yearly income.

An added prize to this year’s Open section was for the best U2100 player, which went to Mike Morris (2086-2076—2.5/4) and H.G. Pitre (1861-1919—2.5/4) on a tie, each awarded $32.50 of the prize fund. Pitre, originally entered into the U1900 section, was flexible enough to move up to the Open so that both sections would have an even number of players.

As mentioned earlier, Geoff Kenway, as the only entree in the U1500 section, took home the $135 first place prize, which leaves only the U1300 left to cover. This section also saw an added prize this year, that for the best U1100 player. As was explained by Chief TD Micah Smith, both the Open and U1300 sections usually have a greater range of ratings, so these additional prizes offer a better chance of winning a bit of recognition and money.

Another plus is that this tournament, like the Quad 45 played monthly at the Portland Chess Club, was rated as a Grand Prix event as an extra incentive to draw in scholastic players, and this year saw a greater number attend than last year. And heading the list of winners in this section was Roshen Nair (1303-1327—3.5/4), who took the top prize of $115, together with a trophy. Following close behind was second place winner Chris Alfred (979-1155—3.0/4), who with 3.0/4 points, earned $65 and gained 176 rating points!

Last to gain a prize in this section was Denis Gurcan (Unrated-1054P—1.0/4), whose one point was enough to capture the U1100, earning him a $45 cash prize and a trophy, and giving him his first provisional rating.

12.e3

As early as after 3.g3 I did not remember what I was supposed to do so between moves three and eleven I played as if the sky was about to fall on me. After White’s twelfth move, however, I felt the position was equal because the pawn on e3 limits White’s dark square bishop. Houdini suggests 12.Be3 with a small edge for White. 12.Be3 Ne5 13.Qb5 Nc4 14.Bf4.

MAY 2016 PCC GAME 60

By Brian Berger

Portland, OR — May 21, 2016

It seemed an ideal Saturday for playing chess—chances of showers, a semi-gray overcast, with sunlight occasionally peeking through. Also, the word was out that Nick “The Raptor” Raptis was back to take on all comers, after having not played in a Game 60 for some time. So a 15-player turnout was somewhat of a surprise, given that this event usually draws 30 or more participants.

Perhaps the scheduling of the event a week in advance so as not to conflict with the Washington Open was the reason for the less than expected turnout, many of the looked-for attendees having already had other plans for the weekend. But those that did show seemed to have a fun afternoon while their counterparts, off doing whatever, missed their chance.

In the case of Brian “Just Glad To Be Here” Berger (1707-1677—1.0/4), I should have been off doing whatever, because whatever I was doing at this tournament was anything but chess. Recently elevated in rating to a personal best of 1707, I came ready for bear. Unfortunately, three of the bears I met smelled me a mile away as easy prey. The first being papa bear, better known as Nick “The Raptor” Raptis (2374-2378—4.0/4), who not only devoured me (metaphorically, that is), but munched his way through ALL the competition, securing the top prize of $45 for his four-victim feast.

Not overly disturbed by being mauled by papa bear, as I had expected as much, I did however feel the bites of lesser bears—Ethan Wu (1771-1772—2.0/4) and Michael Moore (1532-1547—2.0/4), bears I thought I had a chance against in one-on-one combat, but who both outfoxed me (I know, I know, a mixed-metaphor, but feels appropriate here). Only when I was paired with a bear near my age, whom I had met and in previous encounters, Hugo Hartig (1500-1500—1.5/4), and whose growl and bite (much like mine) have lost their fierceness over the years, was I able to obtain a victory.

The only lesser bear on the scene than me was Jerrold “ I Just Want To Reach 1600 Before It’s Over” Richards (1483-1463—

0.5/4), whose half a point came from a bye. But to be candidly fair about this, he and Morgan The Dog could only stick around for two games (enough time for Morgan to get his belly rubs from adoring fans), and then were off to Port Townsend for the annual Rhododendron Festival.

Other bears to show their fangs were Jason Cigan (2156-2156—3.0/4), Phil Seitzer (2108-2109—3.0/4) and Alex Grom (1852-1872—3.0/4), who all tied for second place with 3.0 points each, while also splitting the third place prize fund—enough bread to give each $17.50 in crumbs. Ahh, the rewards of success!

The U1800 went to Chris Burris (1788-1782—2.5/4), an always dangerous bear, who took back to his den $26.25—which I am sure was carefully counted (he is also a lawyer) and put away for a winter day when forage is scarce—lawyer bears are the only ones who do not hibernate during the winter.

Lastly, the U1500 prize was pocketed by newcomer Max Moore-Billings (Unrated-1020P—0.0/4) who, although he did not win a game, was the only player entered in the U1500 category, and thus was a shoe-in for the $26.25 set aside for the winner—the money, I'm sure, easing the pain of his first tournament performance.

In charge of the 15-player field was Chief TD Lennart Bjorksten and Assistant TD Mike Lilly who, with the help of Steven Deeth (in training as an Assistant TD), kept the carnage to a minimum (no bodies were later found), and made sure no bears went away surly.

CHess HISTORY — 60 YEARS AGO

Portland, OR — May 22, 2016

While taking pictures at Portland Chess Club at the May G/60 event I noticed some old Chess Review magazines that were free for the taking. Thought it would be interesting to see what editor I. A. Horowitz was writing about 60 years ago in the July 1956 issue of Chess Review, the picture chess magazine, Volume 24 issue 7.

The subscription rate back then was $5.50 for a year. The cover photo this month was of a chess set at a mechanical-handling exhibition in London. The pieces were so large that a five ton crane was used to move them. Pretty young lady was sitting in the middle of the board.

Fred Reinfeld did an article on the 1859 Evans Gambit game between Paul Morphy and J. Lowenthal.

The magazine listed correspondents for it from many of the states, Washington had J. S. Dewitt. No one for Oregon or Idaho.

Match victory by Paul Keres over Wolfgang Unzicker by a 6-2 score, four wins and four draws by victor Keres. Alberic O'Kelly de Galway won the 42 player Bognor Regis event with an 8-2 score. An international tournament in Dresden, East Germany ended in a first place tie at 12-3 for both Averbach and Cholmov. F. Olafsson won an Iceland international tournament at 8-1 ahead of two Soviets. Chess Review does a lot of postal chess events. Leon Stolzenberg won the fifth annual Golden Knights with 44 out a possible 46.2 points. He had won the third annual event. Glen W. Buckendorf of Idaho was one of players in the final section. The US Chess amateur championship was won on tie-break by John Hudson of Philadelphia, others with the 5.5-0.5 score were Harry Lyman and John N. Cotter. Event was held in Asbury Park, New Jersey.

A report from California says the South lead by grandmaster I. Kashdan topped the North, 35.5-31.5.

The Minnesota junior championship was won by 18-year-old Glen Proechel with 5-0. Fourteen players took part. There were reports from several other states. James Schroeder, who now lives in Vancouver, Washington, was the co-champion of Columbus Ohio. No reports from Pacific NW states. No tournament calendar listings either for this area. There were reports on foreign events also. The 72nd annual match between Oxford and Cambridge in Great Britain was won by Oxford. The series is even. An audience of 1,000 spectators was reported to have watched Rudolfo Cardoso become the first national junior champion in the Phillipines. In the Soviet Union, Mark Taimanov won the 1956 USSR championship with a tie-breaking play-off win over Averbakh and Spassky.

Irving Chernev did an article, "The Russians Play Chess," by doing notes on a 1937 game between Rueben Fine of USA and A. Tehistkov, a Dutch Defense. The game of the month article was done by former World Champion Dr. Max Euwe. The game covered was Vassily Smyslov vs Dr. Miroslav Filip from the Challengers Tournament held in Amsterdam, a Ruy Lopez. Walter Korn did the "Spotlight On Openings" article.

Fred M. Wren did a "Tales Of A Woodpusher" article called "Amateur Sleuthing" about finding chess players. "A Short History Of Chess" by Henry A. Davidson is an article about "Pawns, Peasants and Peons." It includes pictures of a couple of chess sets.

Hans Kmoch does the section called "Games From Recent Events." This month has Smyslov vs Bronstein from the Challengers' Tournament and Smyslov vs Geller from the same event plus a Smyslov win over Spassky. USA games in this section are Louis Levy vs Arthur Bisquier and Max Pavay vs Herbert Seidman.

There are three chess problems in this issue.

Horowitz does the "How To Win in The Ending" article. This one is on bishop vs knight. There is a full page of "10 Chess Quiz," diagrams from practical middle game play with solutions.

John W. Collins did notes to four postal chess games and since this a magazine with a postal chess bent there are a lot of postal chess results but mostly last names so I can not tell about PNW players who might have been mentioned.

"The Book Of The Month" is "The Macmillan Handbook Of Chess" by Horowitz and Reinfeld.

SUMMER CAMPS

By Sarah McCoy

Like other summer camps, chess camps provide an experience that is both relaxed and intensive, with a balanced mix of instruction, live games, and free time. By doing chess throughout the day, all week, participants get to delve more deeply into theory and tactics, and often get valuable, individualized feedback from instructors. Just as importantly, they get to hang out with friends who share their love of chess, and get plenty of opportunity to play new opponents and learn from those games.

There are quite a few options for those living in the Portland metro area. Pete Prochaska and his team of instructors are offering camps for beginner and intermediate players at a variety of locations, including Sunset Presbyterian

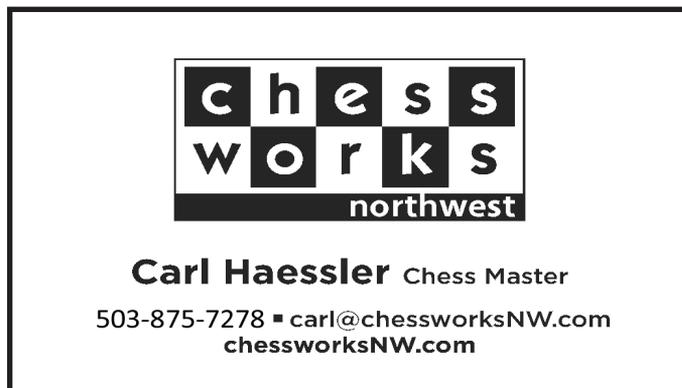

(July 11-15, August 1-5, and August 15-19), Evergreen Presbyterian (June 27-July 1 and August 22-26) and Mittleman Jewish Community Center (August 8-12, half days). There is also one camp for more advanced players (rated 1000 or higher) that will take place July 18-22 at Evergreen Presbyterian. For more information or to register, visit <http://www.chessodyssey.com/Summer-Camp-Schedule.html>

Another option in the Portland area is provided by Mozek Games, which will run camps at West Hills Christian School. Their two camps will take place July 25-29 and/or August 8-12. Beginners will learn basic tactics, principles, and opening themes, while intermediate players will receive instruction on typical middlegame strategies, frequent tactics, and endgame techniques. Online registration is available at <http://mozekgames.com/classes/chess/>

Oregon Episcopal School will also offer camps taught by Mozek Games. The half-day beginner camp (mornings) and intermediate camp (afternoons), both for grades 1-8, will begin on June 27 and end on July 1. To learn more, visit <http://summer.oes.edu/camp/>

Chess Wizards, a Chicago-based company that now offers classes in multiple cities across the country, will run a chess camp at Franciscan Montessori Earth School in Portland during the weeks of June 20-24 and August 8-12. Participants will receive a free chess board and t-shirt. For more information, visit <http://chesswizards.com/site/location/view/oregon>

Students who live in or near Eugene can take advantage of the camps offered by Southside Chess, which are run by Jerry Ramey and his son Forrest Ramey. The Kings Camp, for beginner/intermediate players, will take place July 25-29, and the Masters Camp will be held August 8-12, both at Oak Hill School. More details are available at <http://www.southsidechess.com/camps.html>

IDAHO CHESS NEWS

BOISE CHESS FESTIVAL

Boise, ID—June 4, 2016

The fifth annual Boise Chess Festival (BCF) was held at the Library! Plaza Business Mall in Boise, Idaho on June 4, 2016. As has been the case since the first event back in 2012, entry to all events at the festival were completely free to the public. Food and prizes at the various events were donated by local businesses and sponsors. The BCF, the dream child of Julie Nahlen, is an annual event happening on the first Saturday of June.

The Boise Chess Festival is an opportunity for show and tell; It is a chance for chess friends to come together and remember and reminisce about old stories and good times.

Chip Ruberry shared a story about the late Idaho Chess Association President and former Idaho State Chess Champion Stewart Sutton. He brought a chess set in a Crown Royal bag that had a rook that his dog had chewed with his teeth many years ago, and he subsequently got rid of that dog!

Jeremy Fugal brought a mate-in-nine (or so...) puzzle that he had set up on a board for people to try to solve. The only problem was that the display sign called it "mate in four" which threw some people off from the correct solution.

Caleb Kircher brought some of his trophies and game analysis of some of his best and most memorable games and shared these.

SIMULTANEOUS EXHIBITIONS

This year's Boise Chess Festival began at 10:00 AM with three simultaneous exhibitions given concurrently by three of Idaho's best chess players, FM David Lucky, NM Jaime Crosby, and 18-time Idaho State Champion Larry Parsons.

Before the simuls began Larry Parsons had this to say: "I'm fairly rusty, but hopefully most of the strong players are going to play David Lucky and the other master. That's what I'm hoping! (Laughs.) But anyway I'm looking forward to it. You know chess is such a wonderful game and sport."

NM Jaime Crosby had this to say, "I'm very excited to be here helping and playing with all the kids and everyone so we're going to have a beautiful day!"

Jeremy Fugal shared some of his thoughts before the David Lucky Simul, "Last time I played him in a simul I checked my game on the computer. I actually had a winning position; he sacrificed a piece and it was unsound. Of course I should have taken the piece, instead I believed him and didn't take it..."

Cody Gorman had this to say, "I don't know. I don't know! (Laughs.)" This is likely just a natural reaction to having a video camera put on him and being expected to impart words of wisdom.

Larry Parsons played his simul outside in the great outdoors. Jaime Crosby played his simul in the advance student's playing room of Master's Academy in the mall. David Lucky's simul was held in the center of the mall due to the huge popularity of the FIDE Master in our chess community and was increased from 12 to 20 boards.

THERE IS SUCH A THING AS A FREE LUNCH!

Free pizza, sandwiches, ice cream, root beer and water donated by local business sponsors were available to all at noon.

It is a very nice feature of the festival that one doesn't need to leave in order to eat. Volunteers serve the food and help with the cleanup. Much thanks goes to the sponsors who provide this to the public. For a complete list of those sponsors go to boisechessfestival.info.

UNRATED LIGHTNING (GAME/1)

At 1:00 PM was the Unrated Lightning (Game/1) tournament. That is—game in 60 seconds with no time delay!! This event was run by Julie Nahlen and there were some very unusual aspects to this competition.

The entire event was captured on video taken by Jeffrey Roland and it didn't last too long. It was a single-elimination event, and after two games ended in a tie for the playoff for second-third place, it was finally decided by a tie-break that was very unique to chess tournaments... "I'm thinking of a number between 1 and 10 and I've written it down on this piece of paper, go!"

Despite the appearance to the contrary, this was not a scholastic tournament. It was a single-elimination open tournament, and the adult players were "axed" in the first round, leaving only the kids (who on this occasion seemed to be able to handle this time control better than adults) to go the distance and fight it out for all the prizes.

Temiloluwa Aderogba emerged in first place, James Wei was second, and Justin Siek was third place. It was an incredibly fun event not only to play in, but also to watch.

RATED BLITZ

At 2:00-4:30 PM was the Blitz (US Chess Rated) event. This event was directed by Jeffrey Roland with assistance from Alise Pemsler and George Lundy. There were 25 players in this event, which was played as a five-round Swiss.

FM David Lucky (Eagle, 2377-2378) was first place with 5.0/5 points. Second-fifth place all tied at 4.0/5 points each with Caleb Kircher (Meridian, 1828-1841) being second on tie-break. Kevin Xu (Boise, 1116-1291) was third on tie-break. Cody Gorman (Eagle, 1818-1792) was fourth on tie-break. Finally, Andrea Chimenton (Boise, 1780P-1789P) was fifth on tie-break, but prizes only went down to fourth place.

UNRATED BEGINNERS TOURNAMENT

At the same time of the Blitz tournament was the K-6 Unrated Beginners Tournament which was held outside in front of the mall. Alise Pemsler was the tournament director.

Winners of the K-3 Division were Micah VanderSys in first place with 3.5/5 points, Anna Li was second with 3.5/5 points, and Timothy Merrell was third place with 3.5/5 points.

In the K-6 Division, Jason Atwood was first place with 4.0/5 points, Seth Cardon was second with 3.5/5 points, and Kit Gorman was third place with 3.0/5 points.

OPEN TOURNAMENT

The final event was the Boise Chess Festival Open, a four-round US Chess-rated Swiss tournament. This event actually started somewhere around 7:30 PM and lasted until about 11:30 PM.

The tournament director was Alise Pemsler with George Lundy assisting. $250.00 were given out as prizes (with free entry, this is a great deal for the players). There were 22 players in the event.

Caleb Kircher (1903-1909) and Jarod Buus (1741-1776) tied for first-second places with 3.5/4 points and winning $95.00 each. There was a six-way tie for third-eighth place between James Inman (1814-1803), Cody Gorman (1873-1867), Andrea Chimenton (1780P-1750P), George W. Lundy III (1568-1566), James Wei (1045-1105), and Raymond Botong Bian (423P-711P) with 3.0/4 points and each winning $10.00.

INTERVIEW WITH JULIE NAHLEN

The following is a discussion/interview of event founder Julie Nahlen by Jeffrey Roland that was done June 4, 2016 at 8:21 PM while the Game/30 Open tournament was still in progress.

Jeffrey: Julie, what prompted you to have the idea to have a Boise Chess Festival and how did this come about?

Julie: It was 2012 and I wanted to bring awareness to the community that chess is extremely academic, it's fun, and it's for the whole family. So I put out a graphic art contest to all the schools in Idaho and I got one back, and there we have our graphic from Timberline High School. That's how we arrived at our graphic, and we've been doing this every since. It's been growing every year, and it's a kicker—and awesome sponsors.

Jeffrey: I recall finding on the Idaho Chess Association back in 2006, I believe it was, that I found this kid named Nathan Barry, and he was a kid in one of your tournaments, by the way, and I saw him working on Photoshop. And I asked him if he would design a logo, and with that logo all of a sudden I had this fantastic logo and then, "What am I going to do with it?!" So I had to come up with a website and from then it snowballed. So this is awesome. Kids have no idea what just a little bit of art, a little bit of giving just a little thing like a logo or a drawing can actually then snowball into something much bigger.

Julie: Oh, I know. Yeah.

Jeffrey: So, you go around to the sponsors every year?

Julie: Mhmmm, yep, yep, and it just keeps growing bigger and bigger each year.

Jeffrey: Do you want to mention any of the sponsors by name?

Julie: Oh, golly, I would have to mention all of them and I can't... yeah, yeah, you know. They're all amazing. Everybody does a little bit. Some do a lot. And it just comes together.

Jeffrey: What is, I think I know the answer to this, but what is your favorite part of... like for instance you have Game in one, you have game in five, you have game in 30, you have giant chess, you have Simuls... What is your favorite, personal favorite?

Julie: All of it.

Jeffrey: Just like all of it?

Julie: All of it.

Jeffrey: Well, I have to tell you I just watched that video and oh, my gosh, next year maybe I'll learn how to play game in one because that is hilarious. (Laughs.) The stuff that can happen in one minute chess which, holy cow, a year ago I would not have thought this, but that is... seeing what I just saw, from what happened here today, uh, is hilarious. Kids jumping up and down, illegal moves everywhere, pieces going all over... and smack talk on top of it all...!

Julie: Yeah. (Laughs.) It's so fun. It's all fun. And I actually derive the most enjoyment by just sitting back and watching everyone else have a good time, that's where I get my satisfaction and my enjoyment.

Jeffrey: It seemed like the numbers were down this year although I think it's the funnest (sic) one I've ever seen. It's like people have no idea what they've missed!

Julie: Yeah, those that are supposed to be here are supposed to be here.

Jeffrey: Yeah, yeah, yeah.

Julie: And that's okay. Yeah. The numbers are down because those people that were here I think they really enjoyed it.

Jeffrey: Oh, I'm pretty sure everybody that was here this year will be back next year.

Julie: Mhmmm.

Jeffrey: And uh, like I said I don't know, I won't go on record as saying I will, but maybe I'll learn how to play one minute... You need somebody to practice with and I can't find people... See, kids can find other kids wanting to play game in one, adults don't want to do that. (Laughs.)

Julie: But see that's what I trained James to do since he was five.

Jeffrey: Yeah.

Julie: Yeah, so it doesn't surprise me that he took second.

Jeffrey: So, we're definitely going to have one next year?

Julie: As far as I know. Yeah, they keep getting bigger and bigger. Yeah. And my sponsors are just more generous each year. It's amazing.

Jeffrey: Very good.

Julie: Yeah, it's an entire community that's getting behind this so it's imperative that all of the families thank our sponsors by soliciting their businesses and just dropping the name—The Boise Chess Festival. Thank you for sponsoring because it wouldn't happen if it were not for our generous local sponsors.

Jeffrey: Mhmmm. Okay. Yeah. And you know, they won't know that we like it unless we tell them.

Julie: That's what I mean. And it comes from the people. You know... the people.

Jeffrey: So, there is a website that people can look to see a list of the sponsors.

Julie: Right. Yes, boisechessfestival.info.

Jeffrey: Okay, and is that always going to be updated like even next year...

Julie: Oh, yeah. Mhmmm. In fact, if you go to boisemastersacademy.com you can see last year's entire listing of everything. You know, our schedule, everything that we did. And then I'll upload this year's to Master's Academy as well. So we'll have a history.

Jeffrey: I want to thank you as editor of the magazine that you thought highly enough of us to advertise in Northwest Chess with a full page ad... Any regrets?

Julie: No, I don't regret it.

Jeffrey: It's money well spent then?

Julie: Oh, absolutely, because I don't know where everybody learns about it... from... I don't know, but it doesn't matter. I mean, if they come...

Jeffrey: Well, oddly enough, I learned about chess in Boise (in 1980) from a old, worn-out, yellowed flyer posted on a vacated out of business store because I was playing with a rubber ball with my friend in high school and about smacked into this post... and there it was—The Boise Chess Club. And before that moment, neither my friend nor I knew there were any other chess players other than the two of us that existed in this whole city.

Julie: That's amazing.

Jeffrey: So we discovered it... and you just never know where it's going to happen... and an old flyer that had never been taken down from an old beat up thing...

Julie: Wow. Yeah. Yeah. It was destiny!

Jeffrey: And then here I am doing the magazine, so...

Julie: Mhmmm. It's great. Yeah. Well, we're working on a Northwest Chess Festival.

Jeffrey: Ah-hah... A Northwest Chess Festival! And where would that be in Washington? In Oregon? You know, Frank Niro once determined the exact center of the Northwest, and it was Boardman, Oregon.

Julie: Well, I kind of want to keep it in Idaho only because uh, I want to help draw people to Idaho. Good players to Idaho to give our players some good competition.

Jeffrey: Good idea! So you would like to see more of the Northwest players in Oregon and Washington travel to Idaho?

Julie: Yes. Absolutely.

Jeffrey: That's good.

Julie: And it continues to be free. And it continues to have purses because everything is donated. I don't pay for anything.

Jeffrey: Nobody takes any money, nobody collects database of names?

Julie: No. You won't get any email saying...

Jeffrey: No politics.

Julie: Exactly. If you register this year you will not get an email from me next year going, "Boise Chess Festival..."

Jeffrey: I don't really know anything else to say. Do you think we've covered it? Is there anything you would like to say to the readers that we didn't bring out?

Julie: Um, Just come out and experience it. It's all I can say. And you know, chess is a family uh, it's a family function. It's not just for the kids. I mean yes, my program focuses mainly on children, but it truly is for all ages. So I encourage families to participate as a family.

Jeffrey: Well, thank you, Julie. That's all I have.

BROTHER SISTER CHESS TRAINING

By Cody Gorman

Boise, ID — June 4, 2016

I have been playing chess competitively for four years. This festival was a unique experience to me, as instead of me going alone to play, I was going with my young sister and student. After returning home from college in May, my sister curiously came in on me while I was analyzing a game on the floor. This time, there was no demand for my Lego's or other toys, but an allure for what I was doing. We sat down and soon enough, two hours sped away as I taught her the moves of the pieces, opening basics, and how to mate with the queen and rook against a lone king. Rather than be a lone fluke, after school the following day, we played for another hour. This trend went on for one week, and then another. Even though I was showing her chess strategy I already had made into second nature, my lessons to her reinvigorated my own chess passion.

On the third week, I signed her up for chesskids.com, as since I had coordinated with my parents that I was going to bring her to the festival, I knew that she would have to experience playing with others. Online chess with other people was much better than her playing the computer on her iPad. I set her up, and left her to contend with some opponents. Two losses later and she was furious. She yelled at me for not helping her and stormed off to her room. Was this to be the end of our brother-sister chess training? On the contrary, after waiting twenty minutes for her to calm down, I came into her room to find her playing on Chesskids on her iPad. She wasn't going to let a loss make her quit. Even though she lost more games, she didn't go into the same level of tantrum. I did my part as a teacher to change my tone from a condescending one when she gave away a pawn or sacked a piece to a more understandable one. Instead of saying "why did you give him a piece?" or "what did you do wrong?" I adjusted to more practical sayings such as "what can you learn from this move?" or "what can you do better?" Kitt returned the favor by letting me evaluate her lost games instead of just the ones she won.

At the festival, my sister sat next to me in the simul with FM David Lucky, and impressed me by showing patience for an hour and a half before losing. I brought water, snacks, and headphones if the noise annoyed her. After drawing Lucky another hour and a half later, I saw her playing with other kids. I enjoyed the festival, but nonetheless, I felt as if I was carrying the stress and anxiety of two people, as I played in the blitz tournament,

I equally worried for my sister in her tournament. My sister had a total of three wins and two losses. It was a long day, and for me it wouldn't end till I returned home at midnight. My mother arrived to take Kitt home, and she started crying. She was mad at mom for wanting to take her away. She wanted to stay with me, however, I could tell she was tired. Mom waited in the car, and I took Kitt aside as she had tears run down her face. I told her that I would keep her up to date on the games and review them with her when I returned, and then we hugged.

Kitt recently freaked my parents out by saying she wanted to stop ballet and play chess instead. I don't expect her to become some great master, but I know that from the past month, chess has helped her as a person, whether it is overcoming difficulty with losses, or the assistance in concentration. I love Kitt and look forward to future tournaments we take part in together.

WASHINGTON CHESS NEWS

WASHINGTON OPEN

By Travis Olson (with contributions by Gary Dorfner and Josh Sinanan)

Lynnwood, WA—May 28-30, 2016

Every Memorial Day weekend, the Washington Chess Federation hosts the largest regularly-scheduled chess tournament in the tri-state region of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho—the Washington Open. Although dwarfed by tournaments such as the Chicago Open which occurs on the same weekend and has this year attracted 855 participants, the Washington Open is special to players in the Pacific Northwest nonetheless; it's always nice having a tournament that is close by, where there is no need to pay airfare or even hotel fees in order to get a quality chess experience.

This year the Washington Open attracted 214 avid tournament players! It was a record-breaking turnout, ten more than the 204 we had the previous year, which even then was a record-breaker. [Note: 1992 had 244 players according to Ralph Dubisch. Apparently we need to get cracking on our Northwest Chess scanning project!—Editor.] Although large, this number does not even account for those who came to play in the scholastic tournament on Saturday. For many of them, it was their first-ever US Chess-rated event.

The tournament was held at the same venue as last year, the Lynnwood Convention Center, which makes the commute easier for those who live in Snohomish County (such as myself) and northward. Many players even make the drive down from British Columbia to play. A notable change to the format of this year's Washington Open to previous ones was the elimination of the second highest section, the Premier or U2000 section. In addition, this was the first year that upset prizes, best woman, and best senior prizes were given.

This year saw a three-way tie for first in the Open section (with scores of 5.0/6) between 17-year-old NM Samuel He, FM Nick Raptis, and FM Tanraj Sohal, another young master from British Columbia. Other notable players were IM Ray Kaufman, who recently moved to Stanwood, Washington from California, and our first Grandmaster in many years, James Tarjan from Oregon. Dan Mathews (5.5/6) won the Reserve (now U1800) section, and the only perfect scorer of the main event, Sophie Szeto, won the Booster (U1400) section by winning all six of her games! The main event was directed by Senior TD Fred Kleist and was FIDE- and US Chess-rated.

The tournament also held a new side event Saturday night, the G/15 Championship. Compared to past rapid time control side events, this was a huge success, garnering 14 players! Aaron Grabinsky from Coquille, Oregon won four games in a row! He only needed a draw to clinch clear first in the five-round event, which he did against John Doknjas. John came in clear second (4.0/5) while his brother Joshua Doknjas (3.5/5) came in clear third.

The blitz event Sunday night attracted 22 players, up from 18 last year. Instead of directing that again this year, I left that to Senior TD and Tacoma Chess Club President Gary Dorfner. Ignacio Perez won first in the five double-round event with an impressive 9.5/10, only drawing one game with IM Ray Kaufman, who came in second with 7.5/10.

In the scholastic tournament, the K-3 section saw a five-way tie for first-fifth (4.0/5) between Rushaan Mahajan, Advaith Vijayakumar, Christopher Soetedjo, Ethan Zhang, and Dylan Wu. Anand Gupta won the 4-6 section with 5.0/5 wins (a perfect score), and Joseph Truelson won the 7-12 section with 5.0/5 wins (another perfect score!)

MY PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AT THE 2016 WASHINGTON OPEN

By Owen McCoy

By now the reader may be thinking, "Enough about the Washington Open!" Should that be the case, you are out of luck, as there is one more article you have to read.

I am assuming that you have also read Travis Olson's excellent article about the tournament as a whole, so I won't get into details you might have seen in there.

The tournament was held at the Lynnwood Convention Center. It might be the best venue I've ever played in. It's a brand new building, with lots of light, and that certainly added to the general demeanor of the entire crowd. The crowd was another thing. Everybody came in looking happy, enthusiastic, and ready to play some chess! They just happened to be in the right place.

This was my first Washington Open, and I was very excited coming in, because I recognized several strong players, most notably Grandmaster James Tarjan. In fact, I had hopes of being paired against him in round one (not necessarily to win, but for the experience,) but alas, I was at the bottom of the top half. So I was paired against an opponent rated 1642, and even worse, he had me completely outplayed by about move 30! I was preparing to resign after I tried my last trick, but then, miraculously, it worked! I was then able to convert my advantage in the next few moves without letting it slip.

After a break of an hour or two, I was paired against FM Nick Raptis on board five in my second round. I was also paying special attention to two games that good friends of mine were playing: On board three, CM Joshua Grabinsky was white against FM Tanraj Sohal, and on board one, Seth Talyansky had white against GM James Tarjan. Joshua lost his game after a tough fight, but Seth was actually able to hold his incredible opposition to a draw! Back to my game, I had previously lost to Nick with black in January, and I was eager to try my luck with white. I had prepared a surprise opening ready especially for Nick, so naturally that was what I played, and it seemed to catch him off guard. Fritz 15 says that I built up to a +0.7 advantage early in the game, but then I made an inaccuracy, and the evaluation slipped to +0.2. But then I followed that up with something even worse and suddenly it said -0.7! Soon afterwards, Nick started to go back and forth between this game and the G15 tournament. He was able to win a complicated endgame that I might've been able to draw with more time. However, he did lose against Aaron Grabinsky in their rapid game.

I managed to win my third and fourth games against lower-rated players, but admittedly, they both put up serious resistance! In fact, my fourth game against a 1660 rated opponent lasted 5½ hours! He kept posing me with new problems and making it very difficult to convert my slight advantage. When I finally came up with something in the endgame, he offered a draw, which I declined. He promptly refuted my strategy with a promising exchange sacrifice to get rid of my strong knight and activate his king and bishop. Luckily, he followed it up the wrong way and my rook was able to penetrate, and that was what allowed me to win.

I had registered for a bye in round six because I live in Eugene, and I didn't want to get home at 2:30 am. What this meant was that I had already secured at least a +1 score, so I wasn't as concerned about the outcome of my fifth game. On the other hand, I wanted to become an Expert from this tournament, and with a post-rating of 1990 after round four, I would probably have to win against someone higher rated in round five. Also, I needed one more game against a FIDE-rated opponent to get my initial FIDE rating, and that also raised the stakes for me. I was expecting to have black against Carl Haessler, current Oregon senior champion, as well as current Oregon State Champion. What I woke up on Monday morning to find was that I actually was white against FM David Bragg. I played the same thing that I did against Nick, and he responded differently, resulting in a kind of Philidor's Defense-type position where I had played d3 and had a kingside fianchetto. Immediately after I castled kingside, he played g5(!?), which occurred to me as the move chess players are trained to think is bad. I therefore switch from safe positional mode to bent on punishing his aggressiveness. I maintained a slight edge and took on a large advantage when he made a mistake on move 12. Little did we know, the game was already halfway over! After more mistakes on his part I checkmated him on move 24.

So, I came away victorious and feeling great, and this was complemented by a fantastic view of Mt. Rainier on the way down I-5, as the weather happened to be amazing that day. Overall, I had a great time at the tournament and would like to do it next year and as many more times as they will allow me to. Thanks to Washington Open Organizers, Dan Mathews and Josh Sinanan, and to Tournament Directors Fred Kleist and Gary Dorfner. I hope to see a lot of people there next year!

1.f4 d5 2.Nf3 Nf6

2...g6, ensuring that Black will get to the a1-h8 diagonal before White can, scores somewhat better for Black.

3.g3 c5?!

An ambitious move, perhaps a little too ambitious. It isn't as though if I don't play ...c5 now I won't be able to play it in the future. Here I should probably get my king to safety before going for an initiative in the center by playing 3...g6 followed by 4...Bg7 and 5...0-0.

4.Bg2 Nc6 5.0-0 g6 6.d3 Bg7 7.Qe1!

An excellent way to prepare e4. Here, if I had castled first instead of going for an early ...c5 and ...Nc6, I could counter White's central push with ...Re8 and ...e5. Now all of a sudden I feel a move behind.

7...0-0 8.e4 dxe4 9.dxe4

Position after 9.dxe4

9...Bg4!?

With the idea of either trading off White's strong g2-bishop with ...Qd7 and ...Bh3 or simply taking the knight on f3. The normal move here is 9...e5!, which I didn't see until a couple moves later. If White takes the pawn, Black gets it back with ...Ng4, leaving White with a weakness on e4.

10.Na3?

Yes, c4 is a good square for the knight;

however, this move is too slow. As White, I would have played 10.e5 here, mostly to turn Black's formidable g7-bishop into a misplaced piece. Play might then continue 10...Nd5 11.Qf2!, when Black has to worry about how to defend the c5-pawn: 11...b6?? loses to 12.Rd1!

10...Qd7

If White is going to play slow moves, I definitely want to seize the chance to force an exchange of bishops on h3 or g2. Again, 10...e5! is best. If now 11.fxe5?! Nd7! recovers the pawn with a slight advantage for Black.

11.c3

A logical prophylactic move that also explains why White didn't put the knight on c3.

11...Bh3 12.Bd2?!

Again, a slow move that puts a piece on a weird-looking square. This was White's last chance to play 12.e5.

12...Bxg2 13.Kxg2 e5!

Finally I see the idea! And it's even better now that the light-squared bishops are off the board. With White stymied in the center, Black enjoys a more comfortable position. After a fairly quick first several moves, my opponent started taking a lot of time around this point, eventually giving me a significant advantage on the clock.

14.Rd1 Rad8?

14...Qe6! creates a double threat: ...Qxa2 and ...exf4 followed by ...Qxe4.

15.fxe5 Ng4

Position after 15...Ng4

16.Bf4?

Much better is 16.Bg5!, forcing 16...Qxd1 17.Qxd1 Rxd1 18.Rxd1 Ngxe5 19.Nxe5 Nxe5. White's bishop and rook are much more active than Black's.

16...Qe6!

Again, I belatedly find the right idea.

17.h3? Qxa2! 18.Qe2

Stockfish actually prefers the ugly-looking 18.hxg4 Qxb2+ 19.Rf2 Qxa3, when White's pawn structure lies in shambles but at least he keeps the e5-pawn and has active pieces. Still, Black should win with correct play.

18...Ngxe5 19.Nxe5 Nxe5 20.Ra1?!

Maybe trying to make a play for the a7-pawn, which won't work because I can just play ...a6 if the a3-knight moves. There's no reason to chase my queen back to the center when that's where she wants to go anyway.

20...Qe6 21.Bxe5 Bxe5!

[Diagram top of next column]

Position after 21...Bxe5

Now that White's dark-squared bishop is gone, my bishop no longer needs to stay in the fianchetto to defend the king; it will be more of a weapon along the h2-b8 diagonal.

22.Nc4 Bb8

I love my position here: White has no threats at all, while I have multiple ideas: pressurizing the e4-pawn, chasing White's knight away and then putting my queen on e5 in a battery with the b8-bishop, and eventually pushing my queenside pawn majority. On top of all that, my opponent has barely half an hour left to make his next eighteen moves, whereas I have more than twice that.

23.Rfe1 Rfe8 24.b4?

This doesn't help White, but it makes my job a lot easier.

24...cxb4 25.cxb4 Rd4!

Position after 25...Rd4

The computer points out a very clever idea here: 25...b5!. If White responds with the logical 26.Nd2, Black has some swashbuckling tactics after 26...Bxg3! 27.Kxg3 Qe5+ 28.Kg2 (28.Kf3 Qc3+; 28.Kf2 Rxd2 29.Qxd2 Qh2+ 30.Ke3 Qg3+ 31.Ke2 Rxe4+ 32.Kd1 Qb3+ 33.Qc2 Rxe1+) 28...Qg5+ 29.Kf1 Rxd2. Very cool, but why complicate when you can win simply?

26.Rac1 Rc8!

Forcing the knight away so my queen can invade.

27.Nd2 Rxc1 28.Rxc1 Qa2 29.Rd1

Forced, as 29.Rc8+ Kg7 leaves White no way to defend the d2-knight and save the queen.

2016 WASHINGTON STATE CHAMPIONSHIP BRILLIANCY PRIZES

Championship (judged by NM Dereque Kelley)

Winner: Pupols - Raptis

I came up with six games preliminarily that seemed attractive. Many of the games had nice tactical points and strong strategies but in many cases the party which ultimately lost the game made clear tactical mistakes that shifted the weight of the struggle jarringly and detracted from the attractiveness of the game. This year I didn't see any games with outstanding combinations and so the primary consideration was on how aesthetically the strategic elements of the game were handled, precision, and the opponent's relative level of resistance.

This is why I've selected Nick Raptis' fifth round game. After an exchange of rooks on move 14, Nick Raptis systematically outplayed Viktors Pupols in the following 22 exchange-free moves. Seemingly by magic in the final positions Nick Raptis has a completely dominating position and his attractive maneuvers have payed off with Viktors Pupols being unable to avoid catastrophic material loss. Moves like 30...Bc8!? make this game delightful, and the final position is pretty. I wish I would have seen Nick Raptis rubbing his hands together and boasting around the room as he usually does... just before doing something stupid, mind you!.... :-)

MURLIN VARNER, ADMINISTRATOR

As was expected, the Washington Open with its 5x multiplier had a tremendous effect on the standings for the Grand Prix. To begin with, over 100 players made the Open their first tournament of the year. In addition, the points awarded put many of those people on the leaderboards of their respective states. Three players from Idaho were in attendance: Travis Miller, Nicholas Hawkins, and Gregory Callen. They make up three of the top four Grand Prix leaders in Idaho now, and lead in their respective classes. Of the 13 Oregon players in attendance, 12 are now on their state's leader board, including all six class leaders and three of the second place players. (The 13th player would also have been on the leader board had he stuck around for the Monday rounds. The two-point schedule completion bonus is a significant thing when multiplied by five.)

Obviously, the majority of players at the Washington Open were residents of the state, and, after adding in all the points (for 208 entries plus four re-entries in total), thirty of the thirty-one leaders (including the "two tied" in class A) were in attendance. Mr. Cambareri, you should have joined us. (Your faithful reporter missed being on the leaderboard by just half a point. Darn that HPB.) Even our "others" category is strongly influenced by the WA Open, as seven of the top eight players from beyond the three state area were in attendance in Lynnwood Memorial Day weekend. (All seven came south from Canada.)

Why do I mention all this? Because another of these mega-tournaments is on the horizon. The Oregon Open is coming up Labor Day weekend, and it has a prize fund of $10,000. Guaranteed!! This earns the Oregon Open a multiplier of 6x, the largest we will see all year. If Grand Prix prizes interest you, you really need to attend this one. Before this event happens, we still have a lot of other opportunities to gain points.

June had a total of nine events, including a 2x event in Seattle. July will only offer six Grand Prix tournaments, in Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, but includes the 2x Seafair Open in Seattle. Finishing up the lead-in to the Oregon Open, August will offer two events each in Portland, Seattle and Spokane, plus one in Tacoma. All these events can help put you onto the leaderboard in time for the last third of the year.

Data below is current through June 1.
